WOMEN LEADING CHANGE

As we continue to witness the dangers of authoritarianism and destructive masculinity, Women Leading Change was an opportunity to gather together across geography and faith lines to build intergenerational relationships for support, safety, and greater impact.

Women Leading Change emerged out of the 2021 17 Rooms flagship process- a partnership between The Rockefeller Foundation and The Brookings Institution. In Room 5, led by Blessing Omakwu and Jean Duff, we explored the opportunities to accelerate the positive influence of faith actors for gender equality. Through these discussions, it became apparent that the support of women leaders who are advancing gender equality in faith contexts is an urgent priority and we are delighted to invite you now to join this unprecedented gathering of diverse changemakers and multiply ongoing efforts in the field.

Taking place virtually March 30-31, 2022, Women Leading Change sought to build on the work and success of previous convenings focused on faith and gender equality. Women Leading Change brought together more than the usual suspects. Faith practitioners, theologians, social media influencers, and creatives were all in the room to affirm the commonality of our cause and our action.

Honoring the power of a single story, Women Leading Change was a unique opportunity for every participant to give voice to their own experiences of driving change within their context and continue to build the bridge from past efforts into the work of the future.

While we often feel isolated as we do this work, we know that we are not alone. As we gathered together, Women Leading Change connected participants to others for mutual support—to women and male allies doing the hard work of dismantling power structures that oppress women. Additionally, lifted best practices that will enable us to scale the transformative work we're doing in our communities.

A significant component of Women Leading Change was the exploration of the role that the digital space plays in women driving change in faith contexts. As we highlighted strategies to heighten visibility, we also lifted collective protection responses to the violence women face online when doing this work. Women Leading Change participants were also invited to opt in to a Facebook group following the convening for further discussions and connection. To foster a safe and informal space amongst peers, the convening was held under the Chatham House Rule.

PRESENTERS AND FACILITATORS

AMANI AL-KHATAHTBEH

AMANI is an author, activist, and pioneer in modern media representation. She is the founder and editor-in-chief of the award-winning MuslimGirl.com, the premiere online platform for Muslim women's voices in Western societies. Her keen eye for diverse opportunity in entrepreneurialism grew her teenage blog to become the first Muslim company on the Forbes 30 Under 30 list, making her the first veiled Muslim woman to be listed in media. In 2020, AMANI became the first Muslim woman to run for Congress from New Jersey in U.S. history and among the youngest women of color to run in the national elections. The New York Times selected her first book, "Muslim Girl: A Coming of Age" (Simon & Schuster) as an Editor's Pick and dubbed her a "media titan." Among many projects, she created the award-winning #AskAMuslimGirl web series with Teen Vogue and starred in the Emmy-nominated "Secret Life of Muslims."

EMILY ALLISON

Emily Joy Allison is an author, activist, and co-founder of the #ChurchToo hashtag, a #MeToo spinoff created to expose sexualized violence and abuse in churches, Christian schools, and parachurch ministries. Emily published her debut non-fiction book #ChurchToo: How Purity Culture Upholds Abuse and How to Find Healing with Broadleaf Books in 2021 and has been a critical voice in the conversation about Christianity, purity culture, and abuse for a decade. Emily works as a Campaign Communications Manager for EMILY's List and is currently finishing her Master of Theological Studies degree with a concentration in Religion, Gender, and Sexuality at Vanderbilt Divinity School. She resides in Nashville, Tennessee with her wife Caitlin, their dogs Harley and Oscar, and their cat Debbie.

“SHE BELIEVED SHE COULD, SO SHE DID.”

She currently serves as pastor in residence for Eden Theological Seminary in Webster Groves, MO. During the Ferguson uprising, President Obama appointed Rev. Blackmon to the President's Advisory Council on Faith-Based Neighborhood Partnerships for the White House and awarded her special recognition for her community service.

JENNY TE PAA DANIEL

Dr. Jenny Te Paa Daniel (Te Rarawa) is Te Mareikura and Interim Director at the National Centre for Peace and Conflict Studies, Otago University, Dunedin. Previously she served for 23 years as Te Ahorangi (Principal) at St Johns Anglican Theological College in Auckland. During her lengthy tenure there she established herself as one of a very small group of leading Anglican women theological writers and teachers. Highly respected globally and nationally for her fearlessness in critiquing injustice, and for her relentless advocacy for women's leadership, she has been awarded five international honorary doctorates and two prestigious Distinguished Alumni Awards in recognition of her own leadership example and her prolific scholarship.

Dr. Te Paa Daniel lives now in both Aitutaki and Auckland enjoying a perfectly balanced lifestyle which now prioritises affinity with and affection for, whanau (family), whenua (the land) and moana (the ocean).

JEAN DUFF

Ms Duff works for full engagement of the positive power of local faith actors for the common good. She serves as an advisor to faith groups, and to governmental and private organizations seeking to enhance global and local faith engagement on community development and humanitarian issues. Recent focal areas include Gender, Climate Change, WASH, People on the Move, and principles of effective partnerships. She co-moderated the working group on Gender Equality for the 17 Rooms project, supported by the Rockefeller Foundation and Brookings institution. In 2012 she co-founded the Joint Learning Initiative on Faith and Local Communities which she served as CEO until 2020. In 2008, she co-founded the Center for Interfaith Action on Global Poverty at Washington National Cathedral. Previously, she led the Cathedral's global poverty program as Managing Director of the Center for Global Justice and Reconciliation.

LUSAMARINA CAMPOS GARCIA

Lusmarina Campos Garcia is a Lutheran theologian and pastor and holds a Ph.D. in Law. Her work focuses on Human Rights, especially women's rights. Her speech at the Supreme Court of Brazil in 2018 in support of women's right to an abortion caused her intense persecution, including death threats. In order to confront gender injustice in Brazil, her most recent research work focused on the impeachment of President Dilma Rousseff aiming to analyse how the political and legal systems together fabricated the destitution of the first and only woman President of the country.

DIANA GERSON

Rabbi Diana S. Gerson is the Associate Executive Vice President of the New York Board of Rabbis (NYBR), where she has served since 2005. A major focus of her work has been to advance the NYBR's leadership role in confronting family violence, domestic violence, sexual abuse, and the exploitation of children by reaching across faith communities. She has provided prevention education to thousands of community leaders and clergy, whose role she considers critical to ending gender-based violence, sexual exploitation, and all forms of violence against children. Rabbi Gerson serves as an NGO representative for the NYBR. She is a past interim President of NCADV and past chairperson of its Jewish Women's Caucus. Rabbi Gerson received her Master's degree and Rabbinic Ordination in 2001 from the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion in New York City. She is currently a Ph.D. candidate at the Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam.

BRANDI GROVE

Affectionately known as "Briz", Brandi Grove is a singer/songwriter, a wife, the mother of two extraordinary girls (Camille and Caris), a sister, and a friend. She is a member of the Circle of Concerned African Women Theologians and a Coordinator of East African Region. Prof Mombo is a gender activist, working with religious groups on issues of Gender and patriarchy in as far as the later affects women's full participation in church and society.

ASHELLA NDHLOVU

Ashella Tshedza Ndhlovu is a Gender Justice activist who promotes work against all forms of violence against women and children. She is co-founder of the Speak One Voice movement that seeks to promote a collective understanding of how religion, culture, and society inadvertently perpetuate Violence Against Women and Children and how women and youth can be agents of positive change in creating lasting solutions. Currently active in Zambia, Malawi, and Zimbabwe, the movement seeks to break the silence about violence and begin dialogue that makes a difference – in the church, the home, and the community. Ashella is also affiliated to Prison Fellowship International as Regional Manager, Africa, and within that, provides program support to National Ministries in the Africa Region with respect to in-prison and children related programs. Ashella was awarded the African Women's Public Service Fellowship by the Oprah Winfrey Foundation to study at New York University where she obtained an MPA in Public and Non-Profit Organisations. She also holds a Bachelor of Arts Degree, as well as a Diploma in Biblical Studies.

ELAINE NEUENFELDT

Rev. Dr. Elaine Neuenfeldt is the Gender programme manager at ACT Alliance. She has experience in teaching and facilitating contextual Bible study groups and participating in the popular reading of the Bible movement, organized at CEBI – Centro de Estudos Biblicos – Biblical studies centre and has served on the board for several years. Her professional trajectory is grounded in work on gender equality and women's empowerment with academic institutions, faith-based organizations, and churches.

MICHAEL NGARA

Michael Ngara is the Advocacy Lead at Faith to Action Network, where he manages the advocacy portfolio and represents and assists faith actors in developing stronger and more successful movements on gender justice, peace and pluralism, and SRHR in key international and regional arenas. Michael Ngara has a background in public policy and is dedicated to bridging the gap between policy and practice through evidence-based lobbying and the formation of understanding and perspective alliances. In order to support the redrafting of the East African Community Sexual Reproductive and Health Bill 2021, I'm currently assisting in the establishment of faith-based coalitions among six East African member states, as well as mainstream faith-based technical ideas.

BLESSING OMAKWU

Blessing OMAKWU is a Nigerian-American women's equality evangelist and a deputy director at the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, where she leads the foundation's Goalkeepers initiative. Goalkeepers is a campaign, a community, and a catalyst for action on the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals, using powerful stories, data, and partnerships to highlight the progress achieved and to energize a diverse group of leaders. She previously led the design of a learning strategy for the foundation on "Building Faith Allies for Gender Equality" as part of the foundation's Gender Equality Special Initiative leading up to the Generation Equality Forum. Raised by faith leaders, her parents' sermons and spirituality exposed her to the art of non-fiction storytelling at a young age. Blessing's personal essays explore the intersection of womanhood, religion and (pop) culture, and she ran the On Being a Woman blog between 2015-2020. Blessing earned a J.D. her Juris Doctor degree from the George Washington University Law School and is a current member of the New York Bar.

YOLANDA PIERCE

Dr. Yolanda Pierce is a Professor and Dean of the Howard University School of Divinity. She is a scholar of African American religious history, womanist theology, race and religion, and an alumna of Princeton University and Cornell University. Pierce served as the founding director of the Center for the Study of African American Religious Life at the Smithsonian National Museum of African American History & Culture. A widely published author, Pierce's newest book is In My Grandmother's House: Black Women, Faith, and the Stories We Inherit. She is a native New Yorker, mentor, public theologian, community activist, cable news commentator, and ordained minister.

SARAH SNYDER

A theologian and anthropologist, specialising in inter-religious peacebuilding and dialogue, Sarah brings wide-ranging international experience in situations of violent conflict. She has worked for many years to promote faith-based reconciliation, most recently as the Archbishop of Canterbury's Advisor for Reconciliation – supporting the Anglican Church to be an agent of conflict-transformation in conflict or post-conflict contexts. On his behalf, she also initiated the "Women on the Frontline" programme, recognising the influential roles played by the wives of senior religious leaders in conflict zones. Sarah is the Founding Director of the Rose Castle Foundation - an international centre of peace and reconciliation offering a safe space in which to address misunderstanding of the "other", particularly those of different religious traditions. Their residential programmes equip emerging leaders to act sustainably and resiliently across deep divides within their spheres of influence. She is passionate about working with the next generation of reconcilers, preparing them for leadership in a conflicted world.

INDHIRA UDOFIA

Indhira Udofia, MDiv, LCSW (she/they) provides community and clinical care through a wide range of praxis including therapeutic and spiritual services, clinical and academic research, writing, and collaborative projects. Her extensive work experiences in clinical and community settings (since 2009) and faith communities (since 2014) shaped her deep passion for helping communities and individuals recover from trauma, especially in spaces of spiritual abuse and grief. Indhira believes that her work is a collaborative effort to empower others in their own lives and healing journey. Indhira utilizes strengths-based methodologies that holistically embrace individuals. As a former licensed youth minister, therapist, and spiritual practitioner, Indhira has spent the majority of her academic and professional life examining spirituality's impact on socio-cultural functioning among individuals and communities. Seeing how many experiences within various church spaces influenced people's ability to build and sustain relationships and the lasting impact on community functioning, Indhira felt the vocational pull to provide therapeutically minded spiritual care and counseling through spiritual coaching and consultation, educational resources and experiences, and therapeutic programming. In the context of community, they utilize client-based appropriate practices and rituals, restorative practices, and trauma-informed consultation to address power dynamics, conflict resolution, self-care, and other issues that may arise within a healing framework for the flourishing of the collective.

ANI ZONNEVELD

Ani Zonneveld is a writer, singer/songwriter, founder, and President of Muslims for Progressive Values, a human rights organization that advocates for social justice and equality for all, a strong supporter of freedom of expression and of conscience, women's rights, and as an ally, LGBTQ rights. Ani promotes these values at the United Nations by challenging human rights abuses in the name of Islam, and by offering an inclusive understanding based on universal human rights. In 2017, in Tunisia, Ani founded Alliance Of Inclusive Muslims, a global umbrella human rights organization registered in Geneva, made of members spanning six continents.

TEN FAITH ACTORS ADVANCING GENDER EQUALITY AND SCALING CHANGE IN THE DIGITAL SPACE

The digital space and social media provide dynamic opportunities for faith actors to advance gender equality and scale change. These ten changemakers represent a subset of those who are utilizing digital tools to make the world more just, equitable and transformative.

Khristi Lauren Adams is a public theologian and author of Unbossed: How Black Girls are Leading the Way and Parable of the Brown Girl.

Amani Al-Khatahtbeh is an author, activist, founder and editor-in-chief of the award-winning MuslimGirl.com, the premiere online platform for Muslim women's voices in Western societies.

Bushra Amiwala is the youngest Muslim elected official in the United States and is said to be the only hijab-wearing officeholder in Illinois.

Emma Holten is an activist who, after being the victim of revenge porn, began pushing for stronger internet privacy policies and launched the online project CONSENT.

Abir Ibrahim situates her work at the intersections of economic development, women's empowerment, African affairs, youth leadership and global health, with an emphasis on protecting children.

Sarah Jakes Roberts is a New York Times bestselling author, pastor, businesswoman, media personality and creator of Woman Evolve, a global ministry committed to erasing limits and challenging the norms of what it means to be a modern woman of faith.

Jo Luehmann is a public theologian and public that teaches about dismantling systems of oppression, the effects of trauma, restorative justice, and centering the needs of the marginalized to ensure their safety and well-being.

Sheila Katz is a feminist Jewish activist and creator of #MitzVote, a non-partisan get-out-the-vote campaign that utilizes Jewish wisdom to empower and enable students to engage in the electoral process and celebrate their civic engagement.

Semler is a Christian singer/songwriter, making history and a profound impact in the Christian music industry as an openly queer, nonbinary performer.

Porsha Williams-Gates is a multi-dimensional spiritual practitioner who makes media magic as the founder and visionary of Porshanality Media, whose mission is to create "a genuine sound for the whole of humanity one podcast at a time."

FUNDING OPPORTUNITIES

Access to resources remains a consistent barrier and challenge for women and allied faith actors seeking to scale change and advance gender equality.
